The herringbone wall effect is achieved with a base paint of Resene Quarter Duck Egg Blue, and stripes in Resene Duck Egg Blue and Resene Inside Back. On the floor, Resene Colorwood Mid Greywash.

ALL LINED UP

When it comes to deciding on a design and Resene colour palette for your home, incorporating strong geometric shapes can make such a bold statement.

As a method used in architecture for centuries, decorative shapes are masters of perception and work to stimulate the senses. The use of lines and shapes in interior design is also perfect for creating height or width, capturing movement, enhancing a statement wall or breathing new life into a piece of furniture.

Easy on the eyes, curved shapes offer rhythm and movement to an interior and work well on an accent wall, while straight edged shapes and clean edges provide an airy sense of minimalism.

Bring in your favourite geo-inspired design with a combination of Resene wallpaper and paint colours. An easy way to begin is with Resene wallpaper to give your room a kickstart. Get a taste of Resene's latest wallpaper releases at resene.co.nz/wallpaper and view the full range of wallpapers at your local Resene ColorShop. It's always best to choose your favourite wallpapers using physical samples to truly appreciate the colour, detail, sheen and texture.

Once you have a favourite Resene wallpaper, pick out colour details from the design to inspire your Resene paint choices. Add accent hues in three areas around the room, such as cushions, painted furniture and artwork, to create a streamlined aesthetic. Team with a complementary colour on walls to allow your wallpaper to set the room's rhythm.
